Fight for funding for higher education

KEITH BYRD
staff writer

Student Body President Reid Rucker in his address to the Student Senate used the opportunity to thank Senate for effort given and presented objectives to the student leaders for the new year.

Rucker challenged the Senate Monday night to fight for funding for higher education.

"We are now living in a world market, not just a South or North Carolina market," said Rucker. "The world has to be prepared [for the lack of funding], higher education is needed."

Rucker said several members of Student Government have talked with local delegations in the past. He emphasized the importance for the members of the Senate to talk with state leaders. The new agriculture laboratory and energy facility are in need of the more funding from the state.

Rucker said the University was dependent on four objectives for success (communication, discipline, recognition and advising).

Rucker explained the importance of e-mail and the cable systems for communication. The ability to post notes on e-mail has allowed organizations on campus to be informed more efficiently.

Phony research exposed

HEATHER KAY

Over Winter break, Johnny Calvin Holland was charged with sexually assaulting a Clemson student in his dorm room in November. Holland posed as a psychology graduate student doing research on relaxation techniques.

Incidents like this happen on college campuses all over the country. At Clemson, however, there is a committee designed to deal with situations just like this one.

The Institutional Review Board (IRB), also referred to as the Committee for the Protection of Human Subjects (CPHS), is made up of faculty and staff members from various academic departments where research is done, as well as one medical doctor and two members of the community.

"The purpose of the committee is to review all research activity conducted by Clemson faculty, staff and students," said Dr. Harold Farris, chairman of CPHS. "Primarily, we handle research that involves human subjects."

In order to protect students from faulty research scams, the CPHS recommends a few details that students should consider.

"If a student is approached to participate in a research project, they don't have to answer immediately," said Farris. "They should ask for a descrip-

National Condom Day celebrated

TAMMICA PIXLEY
staff writer

Most people know that Feb. 14 is Valentine's Day, but not many people are aware of another holiday which shares the same date. It began in 1979 when David Mayer, a student at Berkeley, organized the first National Condom Day program on a university campus.

Mayer and some friends dressed as pregnant men and distributed information about safe sex to students. Since then, volunteers have given away thousands of condoms during National Condom Week programs which are organized by colleges, pharmacies and other agencies all over the United States.

Clemson has participated in this national effort to promote safe sex for seven years. A table is set up in the Loggia on Valentine's Day, and students can go by to receive information about having safe sex.

Parvin Lewis, director of Health Education at Clemson, feels that the program is a good way to teach students about something they may feel embarrassed to discuss.

"Every year we give out thousands of condoms, and the students giggle," said Lewis. "But at least they learn about safe sex and have a little fun at the same time."

In the past, students could go to the table and purchase the items for a few

A tribute to Black Leaders

MARI LINN LOVE
news editor

Black history month allows for everyone to become familiar with the accomplishments of great black leaders throughout time. History books sometimes overlook black leaders' contributions. The following is a list of outstanding men and women who have given their talents for the benefit of our society.

February

1 1856 John Sweat Rock became the first African-American to practice before the Supreme Court.

1885 Jonathan Jasper Wright became South Carolina's first African-American lawyer admitted to the bar.

1960 Four North Carolina A&T students held a sit-in at a downtown Greensboro Woolworth lunch counter.

2 1847 Robert Morris, Sr. became the first African-American lawyer admitted to the bar.

1889 Evelyn Fields, US Navy lieutenant commander, became the first African-American woman to command a naval ship.

3 1874 Blanche Kelso Bruce (Mississippi) became the first African-American elected senator.

1939 The US attorney general established the civil rights division within the Department of Justice.

1956 Autherine Lucy became the first African-American student at the University of Alabama.

1989 Bill White was named president of baseball's National League.

5 1884 Willis Johnson patented the egg beater.

1958 Clifton W. Wharton, Sr. became the first African-American U.S. Ambassador to an European country.

7 1926 The first African-American week began.

8 1968 Thirty South Carolina State college students were shot (three were killed) in what has been called the Orangeburg Massacre.

10 1989 Ronald Brown became the first African-American chair of the Democratic National Committee.

11 1990 Nelson Mandela was released from a South African prison, after nearly 27 years.

12 1909 The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was formed.

1989 Barbara Clementine Harris became the first woman Anglican Bishop.

13 1920 Rube Foster founded the Negro Baseball League.

15 1968 Henry Lewis became the first African-American to lead a symphony in the United States.

18 1867 Morehouse College of Atlanta was formed.

19 1992 John Singleton (Boyz n the Hood) became the first African-American director to be nominated for an Academy Award.

21 1965 Malcolm X was assassinated at the Audobon Ballroom in Harlem.

24 1960 Willie Davenport and Jeff Gadley became the first African-American athletes to participate in the Winter Olympics.

26 1966 Andrew Brimmer became the first African-American governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

27 1988 Debi Thomas became the first African-American to win a medal in the Winter Olympics.

In South Carolina, many black leaders contributed to the development of the state.

1870 Jonathan Jasper Wright was the first State Supreme Court Justice in the United States.

1966 Herbert Ulysses Fielding was the first black elected to the statehouse since Reconstruction.

1976 Earnest A. Finney, Jr. was the first black circuit court judge in the state.

1986 Lucille Simmons Whipper was the first black woman member of the state legislature from Charleston County.

These giants in the music industry will be appearing on NBC (<http://www.nbc.com>) and Loci (<http://www.loci.com>) in the month of February, along with many other influential black artists.

Barry White

Barry White has made many women swoon with his deep, hypnotic voice. He is one of those sensual artists who, like a fine wine, has aged to perfection over the years. Barry has brought to the music world a mixture of soul and R&B, with a slow grooving style all his own. Other artists can only hope to attain the "doctor of love" status that this veteran of music has obtained.

TLC

TLC has captivated audiences with their unique style and funky flare. Their jazz, funk, hip-hop style has propelled them to fame and well deserved stardom. They are a living testimony to the fact that you can succeed in the face of adversity. The road to stardom has been a long and trying experience but, Tionne Watkins, Rozonda Thomas and Lisa Lopes have succeeded in making their group reach the top of the billboards.

Tevin Campbell

We have seen Tevin Campbell grow from the 13-year-old child singing "Tomorrow" to a young man asking, "Can We Talk." He has struggled to keep up with the changing times and with the release of his latest album he has proven that dedication pays off. This child of show business has shown the world that children should be seen, and more importantly, heard.

BeBe and CeCe Winans

It is unusual to see just a few family members working together in the music industry and succeed. With the beginning of this group came a sound and a style that has left the music world in awe. From the time "mother and father" Winans took their children to sing in the church, the Winans have been a known voice in gospel music. As the family members grew so did the desire to produce spiritual music. Now, as members like BeBe and CeCe are leading the family into a whole new era of acceptance by reaching out to a broader range of listeners.

FSU freshman charged in 18 campus fires

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - A Florida State University freshman was charged today with 18 counts of arson after admitting to setting a series of campus fires in the last week.

Jeffrey T. Knowles, a 19-year-old student from Fort Pierce, was being held without bond at the Leon County jail after admitting to setting 19 fires, police said.

He's only been charged with 18. One fire remains under investigation.

Knowles told police he didn't plan to harm anyone or any property and could not explain why he set the fires, said university investigator Ron Moat.

"We have some physical evidence that attaches Knowles to these crimes," said Carey Drayton, chief of the Florida State University Police Department.

University officials were relieved to hear about the arrest.

Bill would open university's meeting

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - Legislation considered by a House committee would open many meetings and documents about higher education to the public.

Rep. Tim Harlan, D-Columbia and the sponsor, said Missouri's Open Meetings and Records Law, known as the Sunshine Law, currently allows many meetings about university or college business to be closed to the public.

Harlan's bill would remove language in the Sunshine Law that allows many campus meetings to be closed unless they are opened "at the direction of the governing body" of the higher education institution.

For example, Harlan told the committee, some documents from meetings at the University of Missouri campus in his hometown have been withheld from him and others.

He said those same meetings and documents would be covered by the Sunshine Law if other public governmental bodies—such as cities—were involved.

No one spoke against the bill.

Senate moving ahead with 'wired' universities

OLYMPIA (AP) - A Senate panel Tuesday approved a multimillion dollar proposal to wire higher education for interactive teaching through broad use of computers, television and microwave.

The proposal, a priority of the Democratic-led Senate, was killed last week by the Republican House budget committee, whose leaders think the idea needs more study. It passed the Senate Ways and Means Committee on a voice vote.

The issue is expected to develop into a budget fight between the two chambers, with the Senate seeking an estimated $40 million for the project.

The bill passed the Senate panel after brief debate, in which Republicans voiced the same concerns expressed by House colleagues.

Stars spawn building blocks of life

STAFF REPORTS

Frontier research between professors at Clemson and a German institute for extraterrestrial physics shows that elements, which are the building blocks of life on earth, were actually spewed from exploding stars billions of years ago.

The findings of that partnership were presented as part of the University's department of physics and astronomy's annual Godfrey Distinguished Lecture.

The lecturer was Dr. Roland Diehl, professor at Max Planck Institute for Extraterrestrial Physics in Munich.

Diehl spoke on "The Radioactive Galaxy" Wednesday, Feb. 7, at Clemson's Strom Thurmond Institute.

"Any time you get at the origin of things, you get at something people are interested in," said Donald Clayton, a Clemson astrophysicist. "It's always been a matter of most profound philosophic interest."

Evidence collected by

NASA's Compton Gamma Ray Observatory, on which both Clemson and Planck Institute have instruments, backs up the theory that the heavier elements like carbon, iron and aluminum were spewed into the Milky Way by exploding stars.

"These observations prove that we're on the right track with our research," Diehl said, "but it's not a straight-forward thing. Looking into the deep galaxy is a challenge."

The observatory, launched in 1991, detects radioactivity between and around stars and use it as a diagnostic tool to understand evolution. It probes the origins of gamma rays and seeks exotic objects such as black holes to learn about their relationship to the high-energy particles.

The Godfrey Distinguished Lecture Series was endowed by a gift from the late William E. Godfrey, who was a professor of physics at Clemson.

dollars. This year, in an effort to reach even more students, all items will be given away free.

"Students can play fun games like Sexpardy," said Lori Boland, a graduate student who is involved in planning the program. "It's set up like Jeopardy. We give the answers and the students give the questions."

Students can receive buttons, condom-grams, condom roses, condom lollipops and condom wallets.

According to Lewis, many people do not agree with the program and what it promotes.

"There are certain groups here at Clemson that feel we want to promote sex," said Lewis.

"Our goal is to promote safer sexual behavior and responsibility as well as to reduce the consequences of unprotected sex," said Lewis. "Seventy-five percent of students at Clemson are sexually active, and they need to know the facts."

The Department of Health Education is located in Redfern, and students can go there for information about sexually-transmitted diseases eating disorders, stress management and drug abuse. Students can also go to receive an AIDS test which costs $12.

tion of the study and they should see a consent form. If students have additional questions, they should call the IRB office with concerns."

The most important thing the committee stresses is that the student should see the consent form.

"It is very rare that a project goes through the IRB without requiring a consent form," said Dr. Robert Campbell, psychology professor and member of IRB.

Every research proposal has to be submitted to the IRB, where a primary and secondary reviewer are assigned to the proposal. They review it in great detail and they make sure it has all required elements like a risk statement, description of research and the benefits of the project.

All members then get a copy of the proposal, and they are encouraged to discuss any questions they have with the reviewers. The reviewers take these questions to the investigator, or the person who submits the proposal, and suggest modifications.

"If the investigator refuses to modify protocol, the committee would not approve it and no one could overrule the committee, including President Deno Curris," said Farris.

According to Barbara Warmath, coordinator of CPHS, the committee sees approximately 150 new proposals a year as well as renewal requests.

After a year, if projects are continuing, the IRB must grant approval for renewal.

The committee does not approve every research project. The project has to be beneficial to the public in some way.

"From our point of view, research means something someone is going to present in public or have published," said Campbell.

Members of the committee are appointed by the vice-president of research with recommendations from deans of the various colleges. According to Farris, the Holland case is the only known incident of its kind since 1989 when Farris became chairman of the committee. Holland was captured and charged with attempted criminal sexual conduct.

Unfortunately, incidents like the Holland case cannot always be prevented, but with student awareness and the CPHS's help, precautions can be taken.

Perspective

ROB EDWARDS

He's back!

Just when we all thought it was over ... He's back! And this time, O.J. has a mission. The fact that a jury acquitted him hasn't seemed to satisfy O.J. Simpson.

He has not only resorted to taping and marketing a "tell-all" video concerning the murders of his ex-wife, Nicole and her unfortunate friend, Ron Goldman, but he is now popping up all over the place.

He has made appearances on CNN and even an L.A. radio talk show, spouting off against everyone and anyone who dares question his innocence.

Didn't we get enough of this sensationalism last year?

Sure, there's a new civil trial pending against O.J., which is once again sparking interest, but must we be plagued by a crossfire of accusations between O.J. and Faye Resnick, O.J. and a panel of law experts, O.J. and CNN anchors?

We'll see enough of this once the actual trial starts ... again.

Besides the fact that he is annoying, doesn't he realize that all he is doing is raising new questions about his innocence?

If he would just keep quiet, those who believe he's innocent would remain confident in their decision.

Maybe those who didn't believe in his innocence might learn to accept the jury's verdict and move on to other topics.

Then there are people like Faye Resnick, who seems to have been just waiting for the opportunity to pop back into the media.

It's disgusting when nobodies like her use a tragedy, like these murders, to gain wealth and fame.

Really, who was Faye Resnick before these two people were murdered? A nothing drug addict with big hair!

Now she's a trashy-novel queen who's trying to give Danielle Steele a run for her money. At least Danielle Steele doesn't try to pass her trash off as the truth.

Okay, so I'm ranting, just like O.J. has been doing. I apologize.

It's just that I thought it was all over and that I could come home and study in between classes.

Now, I turn on the television to catch the news and I'm sucked into this alternate universe which seems more like Melrose Place than the news.

Come on people, give it a rest and let easily distracted college students like me have a chance to pass calculus.

CAT adjustments could end parking woes

Getting around campus and the Clemson community has always been a bit of a chore for students without cars.

The now-defunct shuttle system did an adequate job on campus, but provided no off-campus service. In its place, the city has devised the well-intentioned, but flawed Clemson Area Transit (CAT) system.

The CAT system has both its good and bad points. With a little work, it could live up to its potential as an efficient campus transportation system.

There are many benefits over the old system with CAT. The CAT buses take students to previously unvisited off-campus sites like Winn-Dixie, Ingle's and Plez-U. These locations are often visited by on-campus students, especially those who live in Lightsey Bridge-type apartments and need groceries.

The buses also visit hotels, which will prove beneficial for students being visited by parents and friends.

The CAT buses are also blessed with a generally courteous staff.

CAT's riders are treated to friendly drivers who do their best to help them out. Often, these drivers will stop just about anywhere to better serve the bus passengers.

Of course, with a project of this ambition and magnitude, there are bound to be problems.

One of the most frequently cited of CAT's shortcomings is the general slowness of the whole system. The buses usually drive at a safe, but slow snail's pace. Due to the small number of buses in the CAT fleet, they are also fairly infrequent.

If a rider happens to show up at a stop that a bus has just visited, it could be a half-hour or so before another one comes along. This is especially important in the morning, when a missed bus can equal a missed class.

Another problem with the system is that while the buses cover a very large area, it does not seem as if very much research was done to determine where the stops should be placed. Some of the many stops often go unfrequented, resulting in wasted time.

A re-organization of the stops (after a fair period of the CAT's use) could help to tidy up the route and save time and stops.

One shortcoming of the CAT system presented to car owners is that the old shuttle system has been done away with.

A trip from the commuter lot may now require more than a brief sojourn around campus. Students used to the brief shuttle from the commuter lots and the pits have lost a service which carried them and their groceries back to their dorms in a short, predictable time.

The CAT is an ambitious project that has helped many students get around campus or deal with on-campus life without owning a car. However, some problems exist.

If tinkered with, the CAT system could be greatly improved and help to alleviate the parking problems on campus.

Our Position:
The CAT system is a good idea, but warrants improvement.

Letters to the Editor

'Un'Magic'al' analysis disputed

To the editor:

I am a huge NBA fan and must say that I am extremely disappointed with Levi Nayman's column "Un'Magic'al comeback."

First of all, he make Magic Johnson sound like one of those over-the-hill chump athletes and he's not.

Nayman writes about all these 'charity leagues' that Magic has been playing in since 1992.

What 'charity leagues'? I guess he's referring to his complete domination in the 1992 all-star game. Or maybe he's talking about the 1992 Olympics.

Not to even mention his off-season summer team that plays many NBA superstars with people such as Charles Barkley and Reggie Miller, who carry NBA teams by themselves.

The way Nayman writes you'd think Magic has spent his time in retire playing high school games and maybe even once in a while playing in a rough Division III college game.

Even in his comeback game against the Warriors, Magic nearly made a triple double in which he had 20 points and 9 rebounds. Not bad for a guy off the street.

I also have a beef about Nayman's assessment of the NBA.

He writes, "The NBA seemed to be getting along just fine without Magic."

Oh, it has. How can one say that when I've watched several games where the announcers said the league was 'diluted'?

One can even see that the greed of baseball is turning to basketball.

I'm tired of watching players like Alonzo Mourning and Kenny Anderson who worship the almighty dollar and don't give a rip about the teams they play for.

Magic is not one of these players who worships the dollar.

The excitement he brings to the NBA, with the exception of Jordan, is uncomparable.

As far as the return being good for Magic, don't you think that is up to Magic to decide?

Jim White

Magic not an example

To the editor:

I take exception to some of Mike McCombs' assertions in his sports page editorial "Magical Return." While Magic Johnson has been impressive in his return to the NBA, his exciting style and impressive talent don't remove some serious questions about his return.

True, you can't contract the HIV virus from playing a sport from someone. But does McCombs mean to say that there's no chance of Magic spilling some blood on the court, especially in his new role as a forward/post-type player?

True, the risk is small. But this is not the risk of breaking a finger or tearing an ACL, this is the risk of death. I don't think it's right to belittle those who would not take this small risk as "ignorant and uneducated morons." Perhaps this quote is McCombs' idea of tolerance, but it sounds more like a rude attempt to force us all to see things the same way.

As for Magic being a "fine example for young people," I agree as long as we are talking about his perseverance in the face of a daunting condition.

But all in all, would McCombs like his children to emulate Johnson in their personal lives? I hope my kids are responsible enough not to make his mistake. And I hope they are open-minded enough to consider two sides of an issue.

Judging from his editorial, Mike McCombs is not.

Last minute plea

How would you feel if a person killed your mother or father in cold-blooded murder? If you are like most people, hatred for the killer is immense. The first reaction would probably be revenge.

This revenge can come in two forms: life imprisonment, where the killer has to think of his heinous crime for the rest of his life, or the death sentence.

Either way you support, life imprisonment or capital punishment, I appeal to you to watch the movie Dead Man Walking.

Not only does the movie address the emotional side of capital punishment, but also the spiritual aspects of a man.

It presents a criminal who has been tried and found guilty of a crime. He must face his Creator—whatever he perceives it to be.

I have always wondered if last a minute confessions truly cleanse a person's soul. If you are like me, maybe this movie will help you answer this question.

While I fully support capital punishment as a means of retribution, the horrible images the movie presented made me think.

I wondered if death comes as easily as life. And if it does, the image of the killer strapped to a guerny left me with chills that will stay with me forever.

If you support the belief that capital punishment is wrong, the movie may change your mind.

In the movie, the parents of the victims are full of retaliation. The killer took the life of innocent victims.

The parents can only find peace in the death of the killer.

What does not matter is which position you defend.

It is important to understand and have empathy for both the victims and the criminal.

The movie made me realize that capital punishment should not be used as a means to an end.

Rather, capital punishment has consequences beyond the death of the criminal.

Rucker stresses work, motivation

Due to this, student leaders need to look into issues and determine how it works in the best interest of the University.

Student leaders also need to be motivated to their cause and see the responsibility they have to Clemson.

Rucker noted the Excellence in Teaching Awards and the Prince Award for Creative Teaching.

Recognition of faculty is necessary to award those doing exceptional work and motivate others to strive for greater excellence.

This recognition would not only reward those who receive the honors, but also everyone on campus.

The remaining faculty would be given the incentive to find better ways of relating to students, which in return would generate interest from the students.

Advising may be the most important of all objectives. Rucker said that by receiving outside information better decisions could be made.

The last challenge from Rucker is to have "Campus Sweep" be a success.

"Wouldn't it be great to see 6,000 students work with people whom they do not ordinarily work with to accomplish a common goal?" said Rucker.

In closing, Rucker reminded the Senate of their responsibility "to be strong and not be the weak link in the chain."

"The responsibility is to the University and to higher education," said Rucker.

The ties that bind us together

David Pollard
Time Out editor

Welcome friends to the first column by the new Time Out editor. I want to talk to you about our common bonds. I want you to get a sense of the community that we share side-by-side everyday—the Clemson experience, if you will.

I find that it unique that Clemson students control a hill in in Memorial Stadium. That hill is a gathering spot for many Clemson students during a game.

I wouldn't be too surprised to hear that some idiot from another team strolled onto the hill inadvertently and got his ass kicked for doing so. We slide down it in the rain just to get as muddy as the players so we can feel like we belong. It is more than a game or hill—it is a place of worship.

Harcombe is also uniquely Clemson. The type of employees that are at Harcombe are rare at most colleges. We, as students, have watched, day-in and day-out, the employees interact with each other, and us. Saltman and Son-of-Saltman are celebrated fixtures at Clemson.

Nowhere will you find two more dedicated workers that love to talk and mingle with the students. When we leave here, we will miss having ice sprayed in our trays by someone putting ice in the drink dispenser, and we will miss having our food slung on the tray with sour faces. Hail, Harcombe!

We at Clemson have a large Student Government with dedicated people serving most of our interests. However, we share the same feeling of "So what?" We know less and care less about what our student government does. I believe we should be ranked nationally in on-campus apathy. This paper just the other day got the president and vice-president of Student Government mixed up. No one actually cared, and most probably didn't even catch it. See how much we have in common already?

Most students here at Clemson have the same love. No, not sports or sex, but alcohol. We consider Jack Daniels and Budweiser personal friends, and most professors try to work them into their lectures more than any other real-world example. When our human friends turn 21, we take them to meet our aforementioned pals. Sometimes they make us sick, but we always go back.

All of us have had to contend with some sort of housing fiasco. We know that it is a ripoff of our money, yet none of us stand up and say "stop the madness." I hope that once you see how close we all are, we can learn to work together to protest the crap that goes on.

What we must remember is that we pay for Clemson. It is ours. If the establishment does something we don't like, get together and change it. We share that common right also.

However, we all share one thing that keeps us apart—apathy. I am always hearing "what can I do about it?"

Well, unless we get together, you can't do too much. But I will back you if you are right. I will yell as loud as I can. Remember, as Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. said, "Injustice to one is injustice to all."

As we celebrate the contributions that our American brothers and sisters of African descent have brought to us as a whole, think about where we would be if they had said "I can't do that because I am not a part of them."

Hey, it's all part of the Clemson experience. Learn to love it, sweetie!

Whether it be at Clemson, or anywhere else in this world, remember that we all share common dreams and goals. We all must help each other to reach them, or we'll all end up suffering in the end.

Entrepreneurial companies are the new drivers of American business. These companies provide the economy with a constant stream of new ideas, services and products. They outpace many larger, more established companies in creating jobs and offering opportunities for professional growth.

Equis is an entrepreneurial company. Founded eleven years ago, we have evolved from a start-up real estate brokerage firm into a high-growth national services business.

We have created our own niche, expanded our services and positioned ourselves to represent many of the nation's emerging growth companies and major corporations.

We have also maintained a corporate environment that rewards performance and results. Equis' flat organization allows our people to create their own paths to the top. Again, performance drives growth.

Honky-tonkin' ALAN JACKSON

sports editor

When Alan Jackson scored a hit with "Here in the Real World" back in 1990, he was riding the wave of country music's resurgence with several other new stars. Along with the likes of Garth Brooks, Travis Tritt and Doug Stone, Jackson helped to bring the genre back into prominence.

Since then, Brooks has leaned towards pop-oriented songs like "Shameless", Tritt has dabbled with southern rock and Stone has gone the way of Kenny Rogers. Jackson, however, has remained true to his roots.

He has become in the '90s, what Hank Williams and Merle Haggard were to country music in the '50s and '60s. His music is simple, honest country. It's not watered down with string arrangements and not de-countrified for possible pop crossover success.

Jackson, 37, has had success with his back-to-basics approach.

His concerts mirror his recordings in simplicity.

"Recently, I've been looking back at the production part of my show, and I realized that it's been getting bigger every year—more video, more staging," said Jackson. "I started wondering where all of this was going, so now I've started going backwards a little. I don't dance and I don't swing from ropes, all I do is stand there. I think, in a way, it's harder to entertain by just singing and trying to get my songs across."

Jackson's tours have not suffered from his lack of on-stage activity. His tour is second only to Reba McEntire's for the title of highest grossing country tours in the last two years.

He has won numerous awards over the last few years including country music's Entertainer-of-the-Year award. The honors are not what's most important to Jackson though.

"As far as getting something out of my music, other than people relating to it, the writing has been the most important part for me," said Jackson. "Of all of the things that I've done, places that I've been and awards that I've won over the past few years, I still get more excited when I sit on the bus and write a good song. It's a rush to do something you just created and have people like it. That's been real gratifying."

On his first album, 1990's Here in the Real World, Jackson had a hand in writing nine of the LP's 10 tracks. Four of these self-penned tunes, "Here in the Real World,"

"Chasin' That Neon Rainbow,"

"Wanted" and "I'd Love You All Over Again," were chart hits.

Jackson followed up his smash debut with two more, highly successful albums. Both Don't Rock the Jukebox

and A Lot About Livin' and a Little

Bout Love had their share of hits.

Then in 1994, Jackson released Who I

Am. It was an album composed of songs that reflected Jackson's personal feelings and lifestyle, although many of the songs were not Jackson originals. It didn't life and lifestyle, although many were Jackson originals. It didn't seem to matter. Jackson still managed to chart five hit singles. The album helped Jackson bring home eight major awards during the course of the year.

Several months ago, Arista released Alan Jackson's Greatest Hits, a collection of 20 tunes, 17 of which were penned by Jackson. The final song in the collection is "Home," a song from his first album about Jackson's family homestead in Georgia. The song holds sentimental value for Jackson.

"Home" has always been a special song for me," said Jackson. "I wanted it to be a single from my first album, but Joe Diffie came out with a song by the same title, at exactly that time. Once his had finished on the charts, I was on to the next album, so it got lost. But I still sing "Home" in the show now and then, and I've always hoped it might end up somewhere."

Alan Jackson will bring his down-home show to a sold-out crowd at Littlejohn Coliseum tomorrow night at 8 p.m. Newcomer Wade Hayes will open.
Those fans hoping to see a no-nonsense, back-to-basics country concert won't be disappointed.

The verdict's out on Demi's newest film

staff critic

Demi Moore's career has come to the point where she is one of the highest-paid actresses in Hollywood. She is in a position to pick and choose what movies she decides to appear in. In turn, the studios which pay her millions of dollars per movie should be able to expect excellence.

That is exactly what Columbia Pictures got from her in The Juror. This psychological thriller is a thoroughly engrossing adaptation of George Dawes Green's novel.

Moore (Indecent Proposal, The Scarlet Letter) portrays Annie Laird, a single mother, review:

THE JUROR

secretary and budding sculptor. Laird is chosen to serve on the jury for the murder trial of Louie Boffano, a Mafia kingpin. Despite her other commitments, she agrees to sit on the jury because she "could use a little excitement." Be careful what you wish for, Annie.

Days before the trial, she is contacted by a Mafioso who threatens the life of her son. The enforcer, known only as The Teacher (Alec Baldwin), knows Annie's every move: her phone is bugged, her house miked, and she is under surveillance. The Teacher is able to get deep into Annie's head and force her to talk the other jurors into acquitting Boffano.

Talking 11 people from different walks of life into ignoring powerful incriminating evidence proves to be no easy task. From there, the plot snowballs into a suspenseful tale of Mob competition and one woman's fight to save her son.

The Juror is another feather in the caps of both Demi Moore and Alec Baldwin. When they are on the screen together, sparks fly. Moore plays the role of mother, victim, and fighter to a tee. Baldwin (Malice, The Shadow) is convincing as the calculating, psychotic Teacher. As the story unfolds, his obsession to control Annie consumes him. Baldwin's eyes are so cold and steely that he commands fear.

The pace of The Juror is somewhat slow for the first half of the movie, but the story itself has a lot of things occurring throughout. Once the movie picks up steam, you will move to the edge of your seat.

The producers of The Juror got their money's worth out of Moore and Baldwin, and anyone who catches it in the theater will too.

Count on Black Sheep to be predictable

DAVID POLLARD
Time Out editor

Lorne Michaels has produced another entertaining movie, with Saturday Night Live alum Chris Farley and current cast member David Spade. More enjoyable than Tommy Boy, Black Sheep is about a young man's attempt to help elect his brother to be governor of Washington. However, the harder he tries to make a good impression, the worse things get.

Chris Farley is that young man. We don't see a lot of different characters from him in this movie—just one—that of a simple-minded young boy doing his best to please those he loves. Of course, with Farley, the only way things will ever go right is for heaven to supply a little guidance, but lacking that guidance, nature takes over, and a buffoon is born.

David Spade is an assistant to Farley's brother. He is sent to help find Farley a way to help without becoming more of an embarrassment to the family. This results in the old cliché "the blind leading the dumb." One ridiculous situation after another occurs with Spade and Farley.

First, Farley wrecks a truck at a rally for his brother. Then he burns down a children's recreation center. Spade drags him off to a mountain retreat to do some campaigning, but even this place isn't safe in the presence of the buffoon gods. Spade manages to have a boulder smash the house off of its foundation. Just to make sure nothing is left out, nature sends a storm that blows the roof off of the cabin.

The plot is simple and the events predictable, but you will get a kick out of watching a slightly calmer Farley react with Spade to the unusual situations they encounter. You will find this movie entertaining at the least, funny at best.

The stunts are really good, and expect Farley to suffer from the same back pains that plague Chevy Chase, from all the stunts that he does.

Fans of the old Saturday Night Live will find this movie is definitely Chris Farley and David Spade at their best, and that their acting ability is improving.

Brutal Juice
Mutilation Makes
Identification Difficult
Interscope Records

REBECCA I. ROHLOFF
staff critic

Hot Spot: "Kentucky F Daddy"

Low Blow: "Whorehouse of Screams"

Bottom line: Just plain aggravating.

Brutal Juice somewhat resembles a punk band gone metal, only with a failed transformation.

Between the crazed guitar playing and feverish singing are bouts of near calmness, namely in "Whorehouse of Screams." Here, perhaps with the intent to produce a hypnotizing sound, they achieve only a long, tired tune sounding like a compilation of many songs forced into one. The bonus track amounts to a couple minutes of unimpressive, echo-like sounds, which may explain why the song is hidden behind silence at the end of the CD.

To totally trash Brutal Juice would be slightly unfair, since they are almost good, but even with the strong pieces, they manage to somehow mangle them, ultimately creating a rather aggravating album.

Smoking Popes
Born to Quit
Capitol

CHRIS LOONAM
staff critic

Hot Spot: "Need You Around"

Low Spot: "On the Shoulder"

Bottom Line: Catchy tunes and words that keep you listening.

Smoking Popes' Born to Quit has plenty of things to keep you entertained. The music is upbeat and droning at the same time, which is no easy trick. The singer has a deep voice that seems to drag out words. It is somewhat reminiscent of The Smiths at times, but it seems just a little more happy.

Of course, there is plenty of pain and anguish. "Can't Help the Teardrops (From Getting Cried)" shows that.

"Need You Around" proclaims the love of the singer for another person. It comes across really well, especially with lyrics like, "But I'm gonna feel this way 'til I'm six feet underground." It is a good approach to the classic, worn-out song that proclaims love.

The songs on Born to Quit generally have the same sound. The only one that differs much is "On the Shoulder." A slower tempo may not have been the best choice for this final song. It would be better somewhere in the middle of the CD.

Overall, it is a good CD and deserves a listening.

Self
Subliminal Plastic
Motives
Zoo Entertainment

VALERIE ROSEN
staff critic

Hot Spot: "Big Important Nothing"

Low Blow: "Stewardess"

Bottom Line: 40 minutes of listening pleasure.

Self's CD has so many different music styles that it makes it hard to classify.

Matt Mahaffey, with his androgenously cool voice, sings the songs of his life with his brother and some friends helping out with the tunage.

They rock out with songs like "Borateen" and "Cannon" and bring a Beatle-esque sound with "Lucid Anne". There are several other songs that are fusions of all different sounds.

If you have 103X programmed into your car radio, you probably dig this CD. Self will take you to a new level of radio alternative and have you jammin' all along the way.

The Real Horoscope

Happy Valentine's Day, all you lovers! Remember: Be safe, be responsible!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sweetheart, if you think that you can actually fit into those jeans, you have crude realization coming. Get yourself to Jenny Craig while you still have a man, and threads in your pants!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Just because your sign is a Taurus, it doesn't mean you can afford one. Think about keeping your eyes on the oncoming traffic at least half the time, or you can bet you will be tasting steering wheel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The last time you brushed your teeth, Carter was president and you had a Flinstone toothbrush. Think about seeing a dentist while you have those three front teeth.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those tracks in your underwear are natural, but it doesn't mean you can't stop them from occurring. Next time you use the bathroom, use the somewhat soft tissue the University has provided. It could help cut down on the amount of drawers you buy a week, too.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Thinking of graduating in May? Think again, baby! Your ass belongs to Clemson for at least another semester. Student loans will begin to mount, and just wait 'til grad school.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Decided not to pay your housing deposit? Expecting to live off campus? Your credit couldn't hold a clothes basket from Big Lots. Temporary housing is where I would put my money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): I know you think that drinking will get rid of that terrible hang-over, but trust me, it only makes things worse. You might as well face up to the things you did the other night. Both of those guys enjoyed it, and they are thinking of coming back for more. Just don't tell your girlfriend, 'kay?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You've been stinging everybody again. This time it is with that dang fragrance you bought at the Belk counter at a discount rate. You should know something is wrong when it's 15 degrees outside and flies still follow you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Time to see a shrink, baby. Everyone is scared you are going to flip, and no one wants to be near you. "If you don't get help at Charter, please, get help somewhere."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): I don't know who you are trying to fool with that tan, but you couldn't fool the penguins at the South Pole. Spend a little money and hit the tanning bed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hey, clueless, when your girlfriend sets you up to get your butt kicked by her ex to see if he is still jealous, it ain't love. The only thing you can expect out of this relationship is a broken heart and an occasional black eye. Learn your lesson fast.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't you think it is about time you changed your bed linens? Your girl will do more scratching than feeling when you take her to your room on Valentine's Day. Fleas can live just about everywhere, so make sure you spray when all is done.

Terriers tamed, West signs 22

OWEN DRISKILL
staff writer

The Clemson Tiger basketball team vented its ACC frustrations Tuesday night by clobbering the Wofford Terriers 77-28 at Littlejohn Coliseum.

"You stick your head in the Tiger's mouth enough times, you get it bit off," Wofford head coach Richard Johnson said. "That's what happened tonight."

Every Clemson player scored in the contest. Greg Buckner led the team with 16 points, and freshman forward Tony Christie added 12 points.

Harold Jamison, the team's field goal percentage leader, continued his hot shooting by hitting three-of-five from the field for ten points. Wofford's leading scorer Terrence Gilyard tallied ten points and was the only Terrier in double figures.

The victory improves Clemson's overall record to 14-5 with a 4-5 mark in the ACC. Wofford falls to 1-17.

"Our guys came out and were very focused," Tiger Head Coach Rick Barnes said. "We really played well tonight."

Clemson established dominance early in the game by outscoring the overmatched Terriers 26-0 during the first ten minutes.

"It was not fun," Johnson said. "There was not a whole lot we could do to make it interesting. Rick could have done what he wanted to tonight. We were just helpless."

Wofford's Natter Miller ended the Terrier scoring drought with a three pointer midway through the first half. The Tigers, however, closed the half with a 13-4 run and took a monumental 39-7 lead into the locker room. Wofford's first-half offensive productivity included a dismal 13 percent from the field and a point total which Greg Buckner (21) led the Tigers with 16 points in the 77-28 thrashing of the Wofford Terriers. At the half, the Tigers had more dunks than Wofford did points, 8-7.

STAFF REPORTS

Stephanie Ridgeway scored 23 points and Laura Cottrell registered a double-double in leading 18th-ranked Clemson to a 70-53 victory over Maryland Wednesday night at Littlejohn Coliseum.

Clemson improved to 17-3 with the victory, its best 20-game record since the 1979-80 team started 18-3. The Tigers are now 7-3 in the ACC. Maryland fell to 9-12 overall, 3-8 in the ACC.

"They did play hard," said Coach Jim Davis. "We were our own worst enemy, but you have to give Maryland credit."

The win was the third straight in the series for Clemson, the first time in history that the Tigers have beaten Maryland three consecutive games in women's basketball.

The contest was the makeup of a January 9 game that was postponed due to bad weather in the College Park, Md. area that prohibited Maryland from traveling to Clemson. The same two teams will meet in College Park this Saturday night.

"Stephanie Ridgeway once again stepped up, and I thought Laura Cottrell played very well," said Davis. "I don't know how many she scored, but I thought she played one of her better basketball games."

Itor Umoh (25) scored four points and had two assists in the Lady Tigers 70-53 win over Maryland. The contest was a make-up game.

STAFF REPORTS

Wednesday, Feb. 7 was National Signing Day for high school football players.

The Tigers signed 22 players from nine states, including seven from South Carolina. Tommy West's recruiting class of 1996 has been rated as high as 14th by SuperPrep.

Here's a rundown of the newest Tigers:

Dymon Adams, RB-ACC Region choice by BlueChips, had 309 carries for 1786 yards and 17 touchdowns as a senior.

Terry Bryant, DL-A SuperPrep All-American, had 107 tackles, 25 tackles-for-loss, six sacks, two blocked kicks and six fumble recoveries as a senior.

Gary Childress, DL-Brother of Tiger O.J. Childress, ranked as one of the top 10 defensive linemen in the Southeast by BlueChips.

Jarvis Davis, DB-Had 92 tackles, six interceptions and 10 passes broken up as a senior. He was a high school teammate of Tiger linebacker Anthony Simmons.

Jason Gamble, OL-SuperPrep JC All-America, ranked as the 17th best JC prospect in the nation.

Roderick Gardner, QB-SuperPrep All-Florida, accounted for 2500 yards and 40 touchdowns over the last two seasons.

Jason Holloman, DL-BlueChips All-Southeast defensive lineman as senior.

Frederic James, DL-Had 89 tackles, 10 fumble recoveries and 12 sacks as a senior.

Rod Joseph, OL-BlueChips All-ACC selection, rated as 15th best offensive lineman in the South by the Plyer Report.

Jason Martinelli, DL-SuperPrep All-East selection, had 150 tackles, 12 sacks, three fumble recoveries and six caused fumbles as a linebacker last season.

Harold Means, LB-One of the Plyer Report's top 30 linebackers in the South, had 171 tackles, 14 tackles for loss and eight passes broken up as a senior.

Theo Mougros, DL-All-Southeast selection by BlueChips.

Idris Price, LB-Ranked as the No. 4 linebacker in the country by SuperPrep, had 110 tackles and 22 sacks last season.

Ray Redziniak, OL-ranked as the No. 9 offensive lineman in the East by BlueChips.

Ryan Romano, P/K-Averaged 40.7 yards per punt, was 12-14 on field goals and went 29-30 on extra points last season.

Mark Striewing, OL-Ranked as the No. 16 guard in the Southeast by the National Recruiting Advisor.

Ladies whip Gamecocks

MIKE MCCOMBS
sports editor

The 18th-ranked Lady Tigers improved to 16-3 with a 75-57 win over their in-state rivals, the South Carolina Gamecocks, Monday night in Littlejohn Coliseum.

Clemson was led by senior Stephanie Ridgeway, who scored 20 points on eight-of-fifteen shooting and pulled down 12 rebounds.

"She was outstanding on the boards," said Tiger assistant coach Carey Green. "I think she sees that there are seven games left in her senior season and she's rising to the top."

Laura Cottrell shot 75 percent from the floor for 13 points and grabbed three boards. Jaci Stimson added 10 boards and eight points.

South

Carolina was led by the nation's fifth leading scorer, Shannon Johnson, who scored 50 in her last game, scored 25, just under her 25.8 points-per-game average.

Johnson was cold down the stretch, however. She was just nine of 26 from the field. She missed her last seven shots and didn't score in the final seven minutes of the game.

"She is probably the best individual we've played against all year," said Green. "She had 15 points in the first half and we felt like we could continue to keep pressuring her with new faces and new looks. She would eventually wear down. She missed her last five shots off of the front of the rim, which would give the indication that she did wear down."

"There's always added pressure playing South Carolina so anytime we beat [them] whether it's by 18 or 17 or by one, it's always satisfying,"

• Carey Green
Tiger assistant coach

Greg Schmidt/editor in chief

Jaci Stimson (54) had eight points and 10 rebounds in Clemson's 75-57 win over the Gamecocks. Bench players accounted for 27 of the Lady Tigers' 75 points.

Clemson opened the game with a 17-7 run in the first seven minutes, but the Lady Gamecocks returned with an 18-5 run to take a 25-22 lead, with six minutes left in the first half.

The Lady Tigers stormed back with a 14-4 run to take a 36-29 lead into the locker room at the half.

They continued their run with a 13-6 stretch in the first seven minutes of the second half, essentially putting the game out of reach. Carolina pulled to within 12 at 69-57 with 3:37 left, but Clemson scored the final six points of the game.

"There's always added pressure playing South Carolina so anytime we beat South Carolina, whether it's by 18 or 17 or by one, it's always satisfying," said Green. "Overall, it's one of our better efforts, as far as intensity goes, throughout a 40-minute game. We basically wore South Carolina down."

The Lady Tigers were aided by the outstanding play of their bench players. As a group they shot 11-24, scoring 27 points, and pulled down 17 rebounds.

"We've got 12 or 13 girls who can play," said Green. "We're not surprised that those girls have done so well off the bench. If you look at their playing time, it's almost the same as some of the girls who start."

The Lady Tiger coaching staff is pleased with the play of the team so far this season.

"Overall, we've surprised ourselves," said Green. "We knew we had a lot of talent. When you do have a lot of young talent, sometimes there are growing pains. We've had some setbacks, but overall we're really pleased."

Greg Schmidt/editor in chief

Point guard Angie Salyer (22) had three points and three assists in the win over South Carolina. She also had two of the Lady Tigers' seven steals.

Ladies get no respect

It's amazing how unappreciated the women's basketball team is this season. Here is a Top 25 team that holds a 17-3 record, is ranked No. 17 in the AP poll, and posted a season sweep of Virginia for the first time in 11 years.

So where are the fans?

Fan support at Clemson is certainly not lacking in most of the men's sports. I cannot recall the last time that a football game drew less than 60,000 fans. The men's basketball team is on its way to its fourth sellout this season against North Carolina.

Even the men's baseball team has averaged more fans than any of the women's teams. Why is this so?

Of course Lady Tiger basketball does rank in the Top 20 in the nation in attendance.

Considering that more people showed up to see the men's team destroy non-conference patsies than the women's Virginia-Clemson matchup, I would have to guess that Clemson University isn't the only one with a women's basketball attendance problem.

I attempted to attend a women's game at the University of Connecticut over Christmas break. The Gampel Pavilion on the UConn campus holds about 8,000 fans - it was sold out.

I would love to see that kind of fan support here in Littlejohn Coliseum. The opportunities keep presenting themselves. The Lady Tigers defeated N.C. State and Virginia in front of less than 4,000 fans. This is a travesty.

I am sure most fans, both men and women alike, love to see plenty of dunks in a men's game. But what about three-point shooting? I have never seen a man in the ACC come close to Amy Geren when it comes to shooting from beyond the arc.

To top it off, the women are still ranked in the Top 25, yet fans pass up the opportunity to see an NCAA tournament-bound team in action.

I hope that I am proven wrong. I would love to see Littlejohn Coliseum alive for a women's game just once this season.

The Lady Tigers face North Carolina next Thursday night. I challenge the student body to prove me wrong and cheer the Lady Tigers on to victory.

Just once.

Florida Marlins outfielder McMillon hitting hard

Florida Marlins outfielder Billy McMillon is tearing up the Puerto Rican Winter League. He is currently hitting .333 with four home runs and 22 runs batted in for Ponce. He also has 30 walks and 56 hits in 168 at bats and his on-base percentage is .433. McMillon was Eastern League MVP last season at Portland, the Marlins' AA affiliate.

The Chicago Cubs have made left-handed pitcher Brian Barnes a non-roster invitee to training camp. Barnes spent last season with the Pawtucket Red Sox, Boston's AAA affiliate.

Dillard Pruitt was a two-time All-American while at Clemson.

Basketball

Elden Campbell, a Los Angeles Lakers forward, scored 14 points in a 110-103 win over the Utah Jazz

TIGERS IN THE PROS

Sunday night. Pacer forward Dale Davis dropped in 12 points in a 90-83 win over the New York Knicks Sunday. He also added seven rebounds and three blocked shots.

Forward Horace Grant of the Orlando Magic scored 21 in a 122-109 win over the Spurs Sunday. He also added 15 rebounds, five assists and three rejections.

Golf

Dillard Pruitt finished the second round of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am with a 142, six shots off of the lead.

Clarence Rose finished with a 145, nine shots back.

The Pro-Am has no official winner and all participants get $5,000.

Tennis

Gigi Fernandez and Natasha Zvereva, the top seeds, defeated Mariaan de Swardt and Irina Spirlea, 7-6 (9-7), 6-3, Sunday for the doubles championship of the Pan Pacific Open tennis tournament. The tournament was held in Tokyo, Japan.

McCrorey named All-Academic

Tiger linebacker Andye McCrorey was named to the ACC All-Academic team Tuesday. ACC Commissioner Gene Corrigan announced the team in Greensboro.

McCrorey, a graduate student from Rock Hill, has made both the dean's list and the ACC Academic Honor Roll for three straight years. He has a cumulative GPA of 3.63.

Other notable selections include

Virginia running back Tiki Barber, Wake Forest quarterback Rusty LaRue and Florida State linebacker Daryl Bush.

Baseball

Clemson baseball coach Jack Leggett announced that his team will participate in an Orange and Purple baseball series tomorrow and Sunday.

Both games will begin at 1 p.m. at Tiger Field and admission will be free.

Women's Tennis

The Clemson and Mississippi women's tennis match scheduled for Saturday afternoon at Oxford, Miss., was postponed due to inclement weather that inhibited Clemson from traveling.

It may be rescheduled.

"One assistant coach told the guys that our goal was to hold them under 55 because they were averaging 63," Tiger guard Bill Harder said.

"At halftime I told him that I thought we were going to achieve that goal."

The wide margin of victory provided Clemson with the opportunity to rest their starters and give a great deal of playing time to reserves.

Harder, who is recovering from a recent knee injury, played almost the entire second half.

"We wanted to give Bill Harder a lot of minutes," Barnes said. "He needs to get out there and start playing again."

Clemson cleared the bench in the remaining six minutes of the game by inserting Patrick Garner and Brian Chester.

"This time of year it's about us," Barnes said. "We've got a chance to travel again and go on the road and see if we can improve on what we did a week ago. I hope to hell it can't get any worse."

Ridgeway's 23 leads ladies

Ridgeway hit nine-of-14 shots from the field for the game, including six of her last seven attempts. She scored 15 points in the second half and the 23 points were just two off of her career high. Cottrell had 11 points on the night, to go with 13 rebounds, including eight offensive boards.

Those were the only double-figure scorers for Clemson, but seven other Lady Tigers contributed in the scoring column and 10 different players had at least one rebound and one assist. Clemson had 21 assists on 29 baskets.

Maryland was led in scoring by Kelley Gibson, who had 16 points, including 13 in the second half. She also had five assists and four steals.

ALUMNI MASTER TEACHER

NOMINATE YOUR FAVORITE PROFESSOR!!!

The Student Alumni Council each year coordinates the selection of the Master Teacher Award, presented annually during May Commencement to the outstanding classroom teacher as nominated by the student body.

The cash award of $1500 and recognition as the year's most outstanding classroom professor represent the students' appreciation to the faculty and their desire to ensure quality instruction at Clemson.

The Student Alumni Council encourages each student to nominate a teacher worthy of such recognition. Nominations must be received by Friday, February 16, 1996.

Simply complete the following nomination form and mail to the Alumni Center by Campus Mail.
